In my painting series, Black & White, I delve into the intricate dance of opposites—darkness and light, yin and yang. Inspired by the ancient philosophy of Taoism, which emphasizes the interplay and harmony of dualities, my work seeks to capture the essence of balance inherent in all aspects of existence.

In this painting, I seek to capture the dynamic interplay between order and chaos, stability and upheaval. The composition is characterized by vibrant watercolors and black ink, symbolizing the tumultuous nature of change and a dynamic interplay.

I draw inspiration from a profound Nordic quote: "If you want to change, you have to invite chaos." This thought-provoking sentiment encapsulates the essence of transformation and the inherent courage required to embrace the unknown.

Passion changes
Everything

In my artwork titled "Mind", I aim to challenge conventional notions of attractiveness and redefine the concept of beauty.

Rather than focusing on physical attributes, an affirmation that true attractiveness transcends the limitations of the body and resides in the depths of the human spirit.

Embracing Diversity & individuality

In this artwork I featuring a woman with brown skin tones and pink hair against a backdrop of black and grey, I aim to convey a message of celebration of diversity, individuality, and empowerment. The choice of black and grey for the background serves as a stark contrast to the vibrant hues of the woman's skin and hair. These muted tones symbolize the societal norms and expectations that often attempt to confine individuals within rigid boundaries. However, the presence of the woman, with her unique appearance and confident stance, disrupts these expectations and challenges the status quo. Pink is often associated with femininity, warmth, and compassion. In this context, it symbolizes the woman's boldness in expressing herself authentically and unapologetically. Her pink hair serves as a visual affirmation of her unique identity and her refusal to conform to societal expectations.
